

Therapist → Coach: Mindset Shift Snapshot

1) From Remediation to Realization

- Therapy: Focuses on healing, reducing distress, and restoring functioning.
- Coaching: Assumes the client is already psychologically stable and focuses on helping them realize untapped potential, achieve ambitious goals, and design their desired future.
- Example:

A therapist might help a client manage anxiety after burnout.

A coach might help a client design a new career path that energizes them and aligns with their values.

2) From Diagnosis to Definition

- Therapy: Relies on clinical assessments, diagnoses, and treatment plans.
- Coaching: Works with a coaching agreement—a clear definition of desired outcomes, success measures, roles, and responsibilities.
- Example:

Therapy: treatment for generalized anxiety

Coach: Build confidence to speak on stage to an audience of 200 in 90 days

3) From Hours to Outcomes

- Therapy: Charges per session; time is the product.
- Coaching: Prices and structures services based on the value of the transformation, not the time spent.

- Example: A 90-day program that helps a client triple their sales might be worth far more than the hourly total of the sessions involved.
-

4) From Open-Ended to Structured

- Therapy: Often ongoing and adaptable, guided by client needs as they arise.
 - Coaching: Uses a defined process with milestones, tools, and checkpoints—while allowing room for flexibility.
 - Example: A 12-week “Confidence Accelerator” program with weekly modules, progress tracking, and specific end goals.
-

5) From Coping to Thriving

- Therapy: Aims to help clients manage symptoms and maintain stability.
- Coaching: Focuses on creating breakthroughs, elevating performance, and building a life beyond “just coping.”
- Example:

Therapist: coping with grief

Coaching: launch a passion project they’ve dreamed about for years

6) Growth Mindset as a Foundation

- Therapy: May address limiting beliefs in the context of mental health.
- Coaching: Embeds a growth mindset—the belief that skills, habits, and outcomes can be developed with effort, strategy, and feedback—into every stage of the process.
- Example: Helping a client view a business setback not as failure but as valuable data for a better approach next time.

7) Offer Design — Package the Transformation

Therapy often works session-to-session, addressing issues as they arise, with no set “end product”

Coaching builds a clear, structured offer around a promised transformation

Start with one flagship program using the 3-box blueprint:

- Audience: Narrow and specific — the exact type of client you serve.
 - Outcome: A measurable transformation the client can clearly recognize.
 - Mechanism: Your repeatable method — milestones, tools, and resources that guide the client from start to finish.
-

8) Pricing — Value Over Time

Therapy traditionally charges by the hour or session, tying income to time spent.

Coaching prices based on the value of the outcome, not the clock.

Principles:

- Value-based pricing: Anchor your fees to client-perceived gains — like results, avoided costs, speed to success, or risk reduction.
 - Conceptual agreement first: Align on objectives, success measures, and logistics before quoting a price.
 - De-risk with scope, not discounts: Protect your time with caps and milestone gates rather than lowering your price.
-

9) Language Shift Cheat Sheet

- Patient → Client
- Diagnosis / treatment plan → Goals / outcomes
- Intervention → Action

- Session → Milestone / objective
- Coping skills → Strategy / plan

At-a-Glance Table

Therapist Lens	Coaching Lens
Remediation	Realization
Diagnosis	Definition (goal & success measures)
Hourly Billing	Outcomes-based value
Open-ended Sessions	Structured Pathways
Coping	Thriving
Managing Limitations	Expanding Potential

