07 · LEAD GENERATION

Serve, don't sell. People aren't looking for coaches; they are looking to bridge the gaps in their lives.

THE ARITHMETIC

≈8 conversations gives a good chance of one client · ≈40 replies produces 8 conversations · ≈130 personal messages produces 40 replies · a list of ≈250 reached produces 130 messages. A model, not a measurement — we replace it with your real numbers.

LEAD OR CONNECTOR

A lead might work with you. A connector knows somebody who might. Most people are connectors, and connectors are the larger opportunity.

THE CONNECTOR ASK

Who do you know who...? Easier to answer than “are you interested”, keeps the relationship intact, and often produces the discovery that they were the right person all along.

ONE HARD RULE

Never pay for a referral and never accept payment for one — not money, not gifts, not a percentage. ACA prohibits remuneration for referrals; NASW prohibits payment for a referral; AAMFT prohibits kickbacks, rebates and bonuses; in some states fee-splitting is unlawful. Most business advice on paid referral programs is not written for licensed practitioners.

THE RHYTHM

Ten personal messages a day, about twenty minutes, four days a week. The whole list in six weeks. Follow up twice — three days, then ten, each shorter than the last.

START WHERE THE TRUST IS

Face to face → video → voice → message → email. Your twenty warmest people get a voice note or a call, not typing.

THE WALL, AND WHAT GETS YOU THROUGH IT

You will have the list open and the message written and not send it. Shrink it to five, to the people whose good opinion is least at stake — and send the first ones on the call, together.
